

Sinclair Broadcasting's decision to force their stations to air an anti-Kerry documentary, which in fact is not really a documentary, but propaganda masquerading as news, is a clear example of the dangers of media consolidation and corporate ownership of networks.

Sinclair is abusing the public airwaves and doing the American public a grave disservice by mixing political opinion with documentary style news programming. Here is an example of something that may be legal but is entirely unethical. Even those viewers who agree with your opinions might take issue with your methods. I am disgusted by this sort of programming and will not watch a Sinclair station again, nor will I support their sponsors.

Sinclair's actions show why we need to strengthen media ownership rules, not weaken them. They show why the license renewal process needs to involve more than a returned postcard. Thank you.
